The Project Management Institute, Arabian Gulf Chapter (PMI-AGC) Kuwait Branch has announced the organization of a 5 day training workshop on “Building and Transforming the Next Generation PMO and Portfolio Management” due to run next October.

The PMI statement said “the Project/Program Management Office (PMO) has been a growing trend in recent years, although the reality of a turbulent business environment is posing new challenges for implementing PMOs, in spite of the variables nowadays prevailing and constituting a real challenge in the economic and business fields”.

The statement added that, “the growing pressure to deliver more with less and reduce overheads has created a need to find innovative approaches. Whether you are building a PMO to support and enhance your project management capabilities or to focus on the strategic aspects of portfolio management, you may encounter implementation challenges and mixed results”.

The training workshop is designed to anticipate and answer the questions associated with the creation and implementation of PMO and portfolio management proficiency, in addition to outlining the steps necessary for the establishment or enhancement of a next generation PMO that focuses on both the tactical and strategic aspects, and creating the right environment for portfolio management.

The training workshop will be instructed by Jack S. Duggal, MBA, PMP, an international keynote speaker, trainer, consultant and coach, who has personally managed multi-million dollar technology projects inside the USA and abroad. Jack is also an adjunct professor teaching in the MBA and Executive programs at Hartford University, Connecticut, USA.
